THE TWO LOCAL TOPICS OF CHIEF IM-

PORTANCE, There should be no confusion concerning the proposition of a private association of citizens to ask the people to vote $40,000 of extra expenditure upon the levees this year. It is not yet officially before the people, but, waiving that demurrer, the reasons for the appropriation may be ample; they may be insufficient; they may be fortified by engineering and levee-building expert testimony. Whatever it is that moves the association to make the proposition it does not make public, and consequently, no decisive judgment can be formed. To jump silly, is as foolish as to indorse it off-hand. without knowing why it is advanced. But we can easily conceive of reasons that may actuate the association, which it would not be wise to discuss through the public press, until after official and expert examnation at least, and due deliberation. For instance, it is notorious that people abroad whom we would invite here for settlement and investment of capital, are deterred by the advice of the timorous outside public and some of the timorous of our own people. Now this timidity we believe to be without sufficient cause. But our consistency shall be of the right But our consistency shall be of the right and the proper retirement of social rekind in this matter, as in all others, the expressing of conviction at the time, regardless of preceding conviction, or, as the and personal gossip as demoralizing as Argonaut quotes Emerson, "the speaking now what one thinks in hard words, and to-morrow speaking what to-morrow thinks in hard words again, though it contradicts everything said to day."

But though the timidity referred to is But though the timidity referred to is without sufficient cause, it is the hight of folly to ignore it. It has too long been a ress. It is full time to lay the ghost, but if it proves to be no ghost, then to destroy the groundwork of such reality as may lie at its base. It will not do to pursue the ostrich-like policy of hiding our head in the sand under the belief that people who need backbone. If $40,000, or $50,000 would remove the vain fears of these other communities it would be a cheap bargain, and the increased investments made here would speedily convince the skeptical of the wisdom of the policy. If there is any doubt upon this subject whatever let the doubter consult with any reputable banker and ask him what is the tone of his correspondence; or any reputable merchant, and ask whether his credits have more than once been made contingent upon the upper grade? This is a very disagreeable thing to speak of, but since rash and bombastic assertions have been made, the text have the reads have been made, and bombastic assertions have been made, the reads have have the reads have knives with one another.
